Though the weather might not be so frightful in Las Vegas yet, The Cosmopolitan is getting winter ready, transforming the Boulevard Pool once again into the Ice Rink, set to open for cold weather-friendly fun on November 21.

Now in its third year, the Ice Rink expands to 4,200 square feet of skating space on real ice, but the scene isn't complete without snow. New to the attraction, guests will be blasted with snow showers every half-hour throughout the evening on weekends, so you'll actually put those mittens and hats to good use. If you're totally over the cold weather, there are plenty of other toasty activities such as s'more roasting and lounging by roaring fire pits. Also new this year are season passes ($60), good for unlimited skating access and skate rentals.
